Learning objectives

Acquire the jargon and concepts necessary to discuss organizational issues.
 Examine organizational choices at different levels and discuss related design models and alternatives.
 Understand the importance of ethics in stakeholders' decision-making.
 3.A Breakdown complex organizational problems using the appropriate methodology / 3.B Propose creative solutions within an organization / 3.C Organize change management processes / 5.D Make effectual organizational decisions

Course description

Many of the achievements in our world would not have been possible without a sophisticated understanding of how to organize vast amounts of resources and the effort of many people in order to carry out complex tasks. Now more than ever, competitive advantage depends on a company's ability to (re)organize its structure, processes, so as to effectively recognize and realize business opportunities. Managing this complexity requires an understanding of multiple contingent and interdependent factors. This course will provide students with the analytical tools needed to handle the complexity of organizational design in the face of an increasingly globalized and fast-changing business environment. The objective of this course is to provide an understanding on how better organizational choices can be made in complex and dynamic environment. It will provide students with advanced tools to understand how organizations operate, how they can be designed to achieve their goals, and what are the processes and phenomena that affect their functioning. We will do this by combining a rigorous theoretical approach with the discussion of cases and exercises that will enable participants to gain a solid understanding of the complexity of modern organizations.

Course description

The aim of this course is to develop students' understanding of marketing research methodology for better decision-making. Most major marketing decisions made by large manufacturers and service firms are based, at least in part, on the results of marketing research. Only those marketing managers with a solid understanding of research are able to use it effectively. The classes for this module are spread into several sessions. The first sessions provides insights into the basics of the marketing research ?architecture?: problem definition, research design and sampling. The last sessions explores specific data analysis applications of marketing research: quantitative research. This course enables students to execute a marketing research project in collaboration with other students (international)(AOL 1B). Students will be able to understand the differences in research techniques and will learn how to select the right research method for the underlying problem or opportunity (AOL3.A/3.B/6.C). In addition, students will have to present in a managerial way (AOL 4.C) Students are also requested to take part of two behavioral studies this in order to learn how research is done and how to build a questionnaire/experiment. Learning by doing.

Lecturer(s) DEBRULLE Jonas

Prerequisites

This course does not assume that you have taken prior classes on entrepreneurship or business administration. However, it would help if you have a rudimentary understanding of how organizations operate.

Learning objectives

At the end of the course, the student should be able to:

- Summarize the entrepreneurial decision-making process;
 - Assess the feasibility of new venture business concepts;
 - Execute an industry and market analysis, market segmentation, and target market selection;
 - Examine business competition and develop a competitive analysis grid;
 - Decide on a positioning strategy, new venture team, and business model;
 - Clarify possible operations issues relevant to new venture concepts;
 - Produce new business financial statements and categorize possible alternatives of raising money;
 - Understand the role and value that business planning may have on the entrepreneurial process;
 - Retrieve primary data as input to an operational business planning process;
 - Develop and evaluate a sophisticated business plan for an identified or given opportunity;
 - Evaluate challenges and risks inherent to new firm growth;
 - Adequately present a business idea;
 - Have greater awareness about ESRS topics such as ethical standards in business competition and development, and triple bottom line.
- 1.B Successfully collaborate within a intercultural team / 3.A Breakdown complex organizational problems using the appropriate methodology / 3.B Propose creative solutions within an organization / 4.C Convey powerful messages using contemporary presentation techniques / 5.A Predict how business and economic cycles could affect organizational strategy / 5.D Make effectual organizational decisions / 6.B Synthesize multifaceted information from various sources across different functional fields / 6.C - MBA_MIB- Combine different skills and management disciplines in support of interdisciplinary responsibilities

Course description

This course provides participants with a profound understanding on entrepreneurship and business plan writing. Through lectures, testimonials, fieldwork, and group assignments, you will become acquainted with the how, where, when, whom, and why of starting and developing new business activities. As part of an international and multicultural team, you will also work on an operational business plan aimed at either the creation of a new venture (NVC-track) or the acceleration of new business for an already established SME (NBD-track). This course's ambitions thus go beyond providing theoretical insights. Hands-on experience is gained through out-of-class fieldwork covering all steps of the entrepreneurial decision-making process (e.g., idea generation, feasibility analysis, industry study, market analysis, marketing plan, production plan, product development, and financial statements). In doing so, you will accumulate entrepreneurial knowledge and behaviors that support creative solutions and new value development.

PART I - Weekly lectures:

This component is designed to immerse participants into the theory of entrepreneurship and new venture creation, and addresses the trepidations of those who may consider becoming entrepreneurs at some point in their career.

Lecture topics:

- Entrepreneurship intro;
- Idea generation and feasibility analysis;
- Business plan guidelines; - Industry analysis;
- Market segmentation and target market selection;
- Competitor analysis and market share estimation;
- Marketing plan and management team;
- Operations and product development plan;
- Getting funding;
- Financial statements;
- Managing growth;
- Entrepreneurship testimonial.

PART II - Field work and developing an operational business plan:

For this component, students will actively participate to a group-based business plan writing exercise, engage in a mentor-mentee relationship, and assist in feedback sessions (optional). Regarding the writing of a business plan, you will be assigned to a small and diverse team (approximately 6 students). Each team will have to decide whether they want to register for the New Venture Creation (NVC) track or the New Business Development (NBD) track. The business plan component is rather demanding as it involves extensive fieldwork, data collection, creativity, and critical analysis. In order to help teams to stay on track, feedback sessions will be organized throughout the semester. They are optional and cover 30-minute one-to-one consultations with the professor. In addition, representatives of the companies that students develop business plans for (NBD-track) will be requested to mentor their respective team, while NVC-teams are urged to recruit a seasoned entrepreneur who can mentor them throughout their adventure.

After an introduction to overview of financial system, the course covers the key tools that are necessary for pricing financial assets. The course examines the potential causes of 2007-2009 financial crisis, and further aims to show how to use modern financial practices for analyzing real-world financial decisions.

The course further aims at providing case study and supplementary readings/articles that help students apply the topics learned in the class to real-world situations. These applications cover, for instance, topics in risk premium, stock valuation, empirical asset pricing, excess return measurement techniques and capital risk evaluation (insights) after COVID-19 pandemic.

1. Overview of the financial system (Day I)
2. Debt markets: money markets and bond markets (Days II-III)
3. Stock markets (Days III-IV)
4. Financial crises and financial impact of COVID-19 pandemic (Day IV)

4 hours (every day) x 4 = 16 hours of personal work needed. Even though the course is an intensive course, students are strongly encouraged to study about 4 hours outside the class at the end of "each course day". Personal work requires, for instance, solving the problem sets, and includes "article/reference reading" (about 8 hours), as it is required to achieve course learning objectives and for exam preparation.
