

IÉSEG School of Management earns EQUIS accreditation for 3 more years

IÉSEG School of Management in France has been awarded the EQUIS accreditation for another 3 years, confirming its place amongst the leading international business schools.

Awarded by the Management Development Network, EFMD, EQUIS (the EFMD Quality Improvement System) is the leading international system of quality assessment, improvement, and accreditation of higher education institutions in management and business administration. It assesses institutions as a whole, not just degree programmes but all the activities and sub-units of the institution, including research, e-learning units, executive education provision and community outreach.

The quality of the School has therefore been recognized according to top international standards. Since the last audit and accreditation in 2012, the auditors noted the significant progress of IÉSEG in the following areas:

- Diversification of programs with the creation of new MSc programs and an International MBA;
- Quality of executive education programs for senior executives and high potential managers;
- Internationalization of the learning process / and attracting international students;
- Strengthening of corporate relations in France and internationally.

Director General of IÉSEG, Jean-Philippe Ammeux, noted: "This decision recognizes and underlines the efforts of all the IÉSEG community over the last years. Looking to the future, it should help us to maintain our attractiveness for top students and professors, and to continue to improve our international visibility, enabling us for example to develop more partnerships with the best international business schools and universities."
